

Signatory Form for Hemp Food and Bodycare Companies Making the TestPledge

Before reading further, please read thoroughly the TestPledge website (www.testpledge.com). By making the TestPledge, your company can alleviate concerns by consumers that eating shelled or "hulled" hempseed (the inner "hemp nut" that remains after the seed shell is removed) or hemp oil products may cause confirmed positive drug tests for marijuana. TestPledge also dispels concerns regarding hemp oil bodycare products topically applied on the skin. By signing below, your company commits to implement quality control measures which limit the amount of trace residual THC in shelled hempseed and oil, thus eliminating the risk of a confirmed positive drug test.

TestPledge producers and processors of hemp oil and shelled hempseed must commission THC tests on each and every lot of shelled hempseed and oil, performed by a properly accredited laboratory according to the official Health Canada protocol. All TestPledge distribution and/or manufacturing companies downstream must obtain and keep copies of THC tests on each and every lot of shelled hempseed and oil that is bought, used and/or sold. TestPledge does not employ a third party audit to enforce the pledge your company makes by signing below, and assumes no responsibility for your company's failure to comply with its pledge. Signatory companies are solely responsible to honor their pledges on their own integrity.

The TestPledge is effective for a your company's products produced as of the date you state below with your signature. TestPledge covers only shelled hempseed and hemp oil, as these currently are in the hemp products most commonly consumed in the US market. If you wish, you may use the TestPledge logo in any two colors on any hemp oil or shelled hempseed product. The logo is available by hidden link in various formats at <http://www.testpledge.com/logo.htm>.

The TestPledge does not cover any products incorporating whole hemp seeds or hemp flour. Your company cannot use the TestPledge logo on these products or in any way represent these products as being covered by the TestPledge, although you are of course free to communicate to consumers your own company/product-specific standards your company adheres to for whole hemp seed and hemp flour.

The TestPledge for Food

By signing below, your company commits to keeping THC levels in shelled hempseed and oil in your food products below levels at which failing a workplace drug test is extremely unlikely, even when eating high amounts of these products on a daily basis. TestPledge requires that pledging companies achieve this goal by committing to the following THC limits:

- Hemp oil: 5.0 parts per million (ppm)
- Shelled hempseed: 1.5 parts per million (ppm)

The TestPledge for Bodycare

No significant transdermal absorption of THC would occur even in a worst-case scenario of highly compromised skin, full-body application of hemp oil and 10 ppm THC in the hemp oil (the maximum limit allowed by Canadian law). THC absorption from body care products is extremely inefficient and is non-significant as an additive factor alongside hemp food consumption even from unrealistically extensive use of these bodycare products. Thus, by signing below, you commit to observe the current Canadian 10 ppm limit for THC for bodycare products.
